In this. as in other things, men are influenced hy the prevailing fashion. You all kiow how fashion influences the mind with respect to wearing apparel. There, is Miss Love;!ress; and she encases herself in an endless amount of crinoline; and promenades the street like a locomotive Arah tent; just hecause that is the fashion. Then, there is Mr. Buckram; a very common character; who, every morning, fastens round his wrists a pair of starched handcuffs, and huttons round his neck an unhending collar, which threatens to cut off his newly fledged whiskers; all, hecause that is the common fashion; and he does not like to he singular. On precisely the same principle do we find that if the stature of a man happen to he some nine or fifteen inches, ahave a medium height, people are led to regard...
