Not illustrated. 1897 Excerpt: .prepared to take up our work again next September, and push it on with energy. William.--The best educated man, the really useful man, is the thoroughly developed man in his physical as well as in his intellectual nature. Your plan would soon make you like some sickly indoor plant that has not had enough air and sunshine, and does not amount to much. Kate.--You need not stop learning because you give up your books. Nature s book is open before you. In that you may study and learn all you wish. Johnny.--Do you really think I could learn without my books, and have a good time, too? Kate.--Why, certainly. The woods and fields are full of beautiful lessons, and it is quite as well for us to form habits of observation and search out some things for ourselves, as to learn everything from books. Johnny.--O, then...
